Read the passage carefully and answer the question that follows :

Many doctors argue that a vegetarian diet will not give your body the protein it needs. The reasoning normally goes as follows: The body needs 20 amino acids, of which at least nine are essential. You cannot get all of them from a plant-based diet because plants don't contain one or the other (depending on which doctor's recommendations you are reading) amino acid.

We now know that this is not entirely true. For a start, if eating only vegetarian food was so bad for you then all vegetarian people would be dead. But here we are: Hale and hearty. Yes, it is true that while plants do contain all 20 amino acids, you still need to eat a varied plant-based diet to get your full dose of all 20 of them. And it is also true that it is easier to get your amino-acid and protein fix from meat. In particular, soya bean is rich in proteins so it makes sense for vegetarians to substitute the paneer they eat with tofu, for instance.

As soya proteins have become more popular in the Western World, some faddists have warned that soya can cause breast cancer. But no studies have found any such link in humans. In fact, it is in the US and in countries in Europe where soya is relatively rare that the highest rates of breast cancer are to be found. China, where they live on soya products, had among the world's lowest rates of breast cancer.

Most doctors will tell you that red meat is not good for you. That's fine but they should say that red meat in excess is not good for you. A little red meat does no significant harm. Indians will have difficulty with what is called plant-based meat; even if it was good for you. This is 'meat' made by synthesising things like pea-protein. Its chief appeal is that people who like non vegetarian food can eat the plant based version without worrying about animal fat clogging their arteries. This only makes sense if you already like meat. However, over 95% of Indian vegetarians have never tasted meat. Besides, it may not even be so healthy. Many of today's health problems are caused by Ultra Processed Foods. Far better to eat fresh and natural foods, we are told. Plant-based meat is a dangerous ultimate industrial Ultra Processed Food, undergoing many processes to turn it into something that looks like meat.

According to the author breast cancer cannot be linked to soya protein as :

- (1) The Chinese have the lowest rate of breast cancer though their diet is soya based.
- (2) Countries like U.S.A and Europe have the lowest rate of breast cancer as they rarely consume soya.
- (3) No research has been undertaken on humans so far to check whether soya can cause breast cancer.
- (4) Tofu is not such a good substitute of paneer.

Plant based meat is not as healthy as claimed because -

- (1) it is not a food fad.
- (2) it is a natural food.
- (3) it causes many health problems.
- (4) it is an ultra processed food.
